

ORIGINAL FLOW BREAKS OUT ANEW

An Increase of Activity in the Manuka Flow as Well—Overland Excursions From Hilo.

HILO, January 19, 11:20 a. m.—The stream of lava which is flowing over the 1887 flow, which subsided considerably yesterday, has broken out anew. The Manuka flow has greatly increased.

Many visitors are going to the scene of the outbreaks. There are numerous excursions starting and planned to go overland. The Claudine excursion to-morrow is crowded.

Surveyor Baldwin left Hilo today to survey and make measurements of the lava flows.

Practically no damage has been done so far, as the lava is flowing over worthless land.

Did Brooks And Andrews Flunk?

They have an American Judge of the American Consular court in Shanghai, that proposes to have none but the finest, practicing before his court, if a letter received by C. K. Notley by the Korea is correct.

The letter is from H. A. Heen, Notley's son-in-law, who was admitted to the bar here and went to Shanghai a few months ago with the intention of practicing law there. He writes to his father-in-law that the new judge of the American Consular court lately ordered all lawyers practicing before his court to come up for a re-examination to practice. Heen says that Lorrin Andrews and F. M. Brooks, who were formerly practicing attorneys in Honolulu and have been practicing for quite a while in Shanghai and before this particular court with much success, went up for the examination.

AND THEY BOTH FAILED.

That is, Heen in his letter to Notley says they did.

Heen adds that he is studying very hard for he expects to take the examination shortly and he feels that unless he studies very hard he will not be able to pass the examination.

As Andrews has been Attorney General of Hawaii and has been admitted to the Supreme Court of the United States and the Supreme Court of New York and Hawaii, and Brooks has been admitted to the Supreme Court of several states and territories, it would seem either that the American Consular court of Shanghai is very exacting, or that Heen is in error.

The letter included thanks for some law books and other help sent him by his father-in-law.

VIVID DESCRIPTION OF HOW THE LAVA FLOW MOVES SEAWARD

BY MRS. A. S. BAKER.

We left Kealahou for the flow at 7:34 o'clock, taking a chafing dish, provisions and blankets. We did not get to where we camped for the night until five o'clock. We figure that it is 36 or 37 miles from here. The last part of the road is over old flows and very hard travelling and we all got very tired and began to wonder if there was any flow anywhere. We could not see a sign of it until we got almost there and had not supposed it was so far. The Augusta had been there the night before and staid over so when we reached their camp we stopped and settled our things for the night.

The first flow was about six miles beyond but we could not go to it for a second flow was coming down so fast this side of it that we were afraid of being cut off. We walked on about half a mile and stood on the road watching the lava as it came. It flows over an old flow but there were scattered trees that were constantly catching fire and burning. When we first got there it was about half a mile above the road and we were fascinated with watching the wall of fire as it crept along. The end of it had the appearance of a-a. Instead of running like water as they said the flow did the night before it seemed like an immense wall of red hot stones pushing along. Those at the top would keep rolling down and there was the constant click and rattle of stones but not much other noise.

We could see this red hot serpent for miles up the mountain. I should say fifteen or twenty miles but in some places it seemed to be running in waves like water. It was almost as light as day all around us. After watching it for sometime we went back to the camp for some supper and missed it cross the road which they say was a great sight. They say it took a sudden rush just then and went rushing across in a red hot wall about fifteen feet high covering telephone posts and wire as it went. When we got back to the scene the road where we had stood was covered twenty or twenty-five feet deep with lava and amount of red hot fire. There was a little branch creeping out at one side that we kept watching for fear it would cut us off from camp.

Our camping place was on a rise of ground so we had a splendid view from there of the flow as a whole and watched it most of the night although we did take our pillows and blankets and lie down two different times on the a-a and try to sleep. People kept arriving until midnight and I should say there must have been at least a hundred and fifty people there. Many were our friends and it was pleasant to meet them and talk it over with them. People got there in every possible way. There were some walking and others came by horses, donkeys, bicycles, automobiles, surreys, brakes, wagons and buggies. One party of three were going in a brake with a small horse and a boy on horse back pulling them along. Almost everyone started home in the night but we stayed until daylight to see how it looked then and take some pictures. The sight was nothing compared with the night.

A LIGHT FOR FORTY MILES

By Rev. D. Douglas Wallace.

KEalahou, Hawaii, January 19th, 1907.—I have just returned from a trip to "The Flow" forty miles from here. First, all we can see from here is the glow which almost every night since the outbreak has crimsoned the sky, mauka for miles; the general impression which prevails here is, that the eruption is not from the summit crater, but considerably to the west of it, the flows at present are in the Kau district, the nearest being probably eight miles from the Kona boundary, this flow crossed the government road early Tuesday morning. To picture the mass of flowing fire adequately is beyond the power of my pen. As far as the eye could reach up the mountain side the lava rolled down in great waves of fire. The place was lighted for miles round so that one could read without difficulty. Even here, forty miles off, it is as light as a night when the moon is full. The impression at present is that the glow tonight indicates still greater activity. I am sorry I have not the time to give you fuller information. The flow I saw was probably over a mile wide and rose on the government road some twenty feet. Of course all communication is cut off with Kau from this side.

TWO BOAT LOADS OFF TO LAVA FLOW

MERRY CROWDS LEAVE THIS MORNING IN STEAMSHIP KINAU AND MAUNA LOA ON SPECIAL EXCURSIONS TO VIEW MAUNA LOA'S FIERY RIVERS—EXTRA COAL, PROVISIONS, MATTRESSES AND BLANKETS TAKEN ABOARD.

A record was this morning established for outgoing passengers on local boats. Drawn to Hawaii by the lava flows of Mauna Loa, over two hundred, 238 to be exact, men and women departed in the Inter-Island steamship Mauna Loa and Kinau on special excursions to view the volcanic activity. The Mauna Loa, getting away promptly at 10 o'clock, carried 83 passengers, according to the company's list, although there are probably thirty or forty more aboard who are taking their chances in regard to sleeping accommodations and whose names, in the rush, although they had, of course, the price of their fares, did not get on the official list. At 10:30 o'clock the S. S. Kinau left the wharf with 130 persons on her deck.

The occasion of the departure of these boats was made an event by the hundreds who gathered on the wharves to wish their departing friends a merry time and a good view of the lava flows. Among the wharf crowds there were some who had desired and intended to take passage, either on the Kinau or the Mauna Loa, but who cancelled their engagements owing to the fact that they could not secure sleeping accommodations on either vessel.

Some, if not all, of these disappointed ones will have the opportunity of making good at noon on Monday next, if the lava flows continue, for the S. S. Maui will be dispatched at that time on a special excursion. Then there is quite a crowd booked to board the S. S. Claudine at Hilo today, for the flows, and last night when the Claudine left Honolulu she carried several who went with the idea of taking in the wonder.

The S. S. Kinau arrived this morning from her regular Hilo and way port trip about 9:25 o'clock and at once 25 tons of extra coal hurried aboard and additional provisions, blankets and mattresses were hustled to the boat. She was starting away again on the excursion within an hour after she arrived.
